Nothing Allowed To Go to Waste In 9 Big Plants

By JOHN COLLINS

Casters for babies' high chairs are among the great variety of things manufactured by the Stewart-Warner Speedometer Corporation. This concern shows forcefully the way American industry has reduced waste to a minimum by utilizing for the manufacture of by-products every piece of metal it puts in process.

The principal business of the Stewart Corporation is the manufacture of automobile speedometers, producing about 15,000 daily. It makes in addition, however, vacuum tanks, bumpers, spotlights, shock absorbers, windshield wipers and many other things used in the motor car industry.

But this is not all. During the past few years the Stewart concern has been pushing a radio set. At present Stewart is the third largest radio manufacturer in the world, turning out about 1,000 sets per day.

Has Nine Plants

Altogether, Stewart-Warner operates nine plants with a combined area of more than 2,000,000 square feet. The main plant in Chicago alone covers twenty-three acres of floor space. There is installed the largest battery of automatic screw machines in the world.

In the growing tendency for large concerns to give their employees a direct interest in the profits, Stewart-Warner has played a prominent part. Some time ago it devised a special plan which enabled its workers to buy stock on advantageous terms. Several thousand have availed themselves of the opportunity.

fire, made a tour of the Tombs, questioning prisoners and guards in connection with the shootings.

6. Werner and Oscar Amberg, 32, of 2620 Beverly Road, Brooklyn, faced arraignment in Homicide Court on charges of first degree murder, growing out of the deaths. They are alleged by the state to have played a part in getting weapons over the walls, and therefore, under the law, are as liable as the men whom they are said to have aided.

7. Commissioner of Accounts Warren, in receipt of a letter from Mayor Walker asking an immediate investigation, declared he would begin taking testimony late today.

Fred A. Wallis

Peter A. Mallon

8. Warden Harry Honeck joined in the chorus of official criticism when he urged the use of more guards in transporting prisoners, asserting that only one man rode in each van, acting as driver and guard.

Commissioner Wallis was the storm center of all the investigations. Chief Assistant District Attorney Pecora was emphatic in his statements that some guard in the prison was responsible for the weapons, alleged to have been thrown over the walls, reaching the hands of the three dead prisoners, Michael (Red) McKenna, Hyman Amberg, brother of Oscar, and Oliver Berg.

Admits Supplying Guns

"Weiner has confessed to me that he tossed the weapons—he claims he had only two—over the southeast corner. That is at Leonard and Center Streets. If he did this, some keeper must have picked them up and delivered them," Pecora said. He found it hard to answer a question to the effect that if a keeper was involved, why did not the keeper bring the weapons in and hand them directly to the prisoners, thus avoiding needless risk.

Resignation Predicted

Mayor Walker also intimated his dissatisfaction with the Wallis regime in asking both Wallis and Warren to investigate, and it was predicted that the former would resign within forty-eight hours.

Wallis, while touring the Tombs with Pecora, told newspaper men he was "ready for any investigation, and willing to aid in uncovering any of the alleged irregularities."

Eisman Held as Witness

Commissioner McLaughlin, after questioning the latest arrested man, Eisman, said that he would be held merely as a witness if his story stood up. He said Eisman had told him he had loaned Weiner the auto license "out of friendship" and because "he was afraid not to," and that he did not know what Weiner expected to use the car for.

McLaughlin admitted detectives were shadowing the mysterious Jones and that his arrest might come shortly. He said Jones had visited McKenna on Wednesday. He appeared satisfied with the alleged confession of Weiner, and asserted he was working on three fresh angles. The first was the connection, if any, of Oscar Amberg with the case.

Mystery Woman in Case

The second was the mysterious appearance of a woman who walked up and down Center Street while Weiner and Oscar Amberg visited Hyman Amberg. The third is the means by which the third weapon was introduced into the prison and placed in the hands of one of the three men—presumably McKenna. The revolver is of Smith & Wesson make and has a shiny nickel barrel, which glistened in the sunlight while McKenna blazed at his foes.

While the police were busy rounding up outside clues, and Wallis and Pecora were checking up on the inside, officials from the state prison board began their investigation, and declared they would make public their findings on Monday.

New Arrests Likely

Inspector Arthur Carey, homicide expert of the Police Department, concurred with Pecora in the belief that prison guards aided in getting the revolvers to the prisoners, and suggested that still more arrests might result when a check was made to see whether any cars were standing in front of the prison to aid the men after they got outside the walls.

All officials agree that the men were under the influence of drugs when they made their break and this is another matter which warrants investigation, this time with the Federal government doing the investigating.

Open New "Dope" Probe

Two agents a few months ago disguised as prisoners were placed in cells and their findings were startling. For a while, after the suspension and sentence of two attaches it was thought the drug evil had been overcome but since this time apparently one or more guards have seen fit to make "side money" by peddling the narcotics.

The county grand jury is expected to conduct its own investigation and add to it findings made by Pecora and his assistants.

The affairs of Wallis are being brought to light with the investigation. It has been recalled that former Commissioner of Accounts Hirshfield, after a recent inquiry, declared him a "hopeless incompetent," asserting that he spent large sums of money for radios and books and other luxuries so the prisoners might be more comfortable.

Bury Two Tomorrow

The funeral of Warden Mallon will take place at 10 a. m. tomorrow from the home, 153 East 57th St., thence to the Church of St. John the Evangelist.

Keeper Jeremiah Murphy's funeral will be at the same hour from the home at 1695 Lexington Ave. Solemn high mass will be celebrated at St. Cecilia's Church near by.

Amberg's body has been claimed. Berg's body has not, nor has McKenna's.

STOCK EXCHANGE MEMBER DEMANDS RECEIVERSHIP

Application for the appointment of a temporary receiver for the Consolidated Stock Exchange was made today in Supreme Court by John H. Frohisher, a member. He said that he wished to prevent the dissipation of the $300,000 assets of the exchange. Decision was reserved.

whole counties and states plucked into humiliating and nerve-racking labor, and the fair escutcheon of our common humanity itself blackened with treachery and the slime of sensualism, because a guilty couple surrender to unholy temptation, selfishly forget others, and weakly follow an illegitimate love rather than safeguard all of these holy interests involved by the courageous resistance to temptation and the doing of that which is right, at all hazards and any individual cost.

BURGLARS GET $800

WALTHAM, MASS., Nov. 5 (By U. P.).—Breaking open a small safe with a sledge hammer, burglars obtained $800 in cash at the Central Square Theater during the night.
